Dear readers,

We are a year away from having accepted the challenge of continuing to lead the Mexican Journal of Neuroscience on a good path, after the great work done by Drs. Carlos Cantú Brito and Erwin Chiquete Anaya, as Editor-in-Chief and as co-editor respectively, we have been learning about the complexity of this work and we are working with the support of experts and the entire neurological community of the country in order to achieve indexation and a best positioning of the journal, that we hope will be proud of the Neurology of Mexico.

One of the important points in this achievement is to have a journal published in both Spanish and English, with the highest quality standards and that is why an expert translator is supporting us; however, the feasibility of continuing with this process is complicated because of the high cost involved. Faced with this situation, the Board Members have raised the possibility of asking those who favor us with their work to cover the average cost of the translation into English of their article, in the effort to keep this new work scheme viable.

Although the commercial opening of our publication seems bound to support it, we maintain the commitment to avoid influencing the articles that are published to our readers and of course, due to the possible appearance of commercial pharmaceutical houses in the next publications, we do not want to give preference to brands, pharmaceutical products or diagnostic support in an unethical way and our final objective is to favor the neurological knowledge of our readers for the benefit of their patients.

The country is in a new electoral process, in which it is desirable that justice, welfare, health and especially education are sought for all of society, our community participates actively, as we are part of those who have the privilege of having received a professional education that has allowed us to live with wealth that not all the population has, that is why our social commitment becomes more important and the need to transform society in an honest and responsible way also corresponds to us, because if the words move, the example drags.

A similar process is to be lived within the Mexican Academy of Neurology and each one of its members will surely participate actively supporting the one who considers their ideas related. Whoever may end as a winner of this process, our work must maintain a line of transparency so clear that it can be shown with numbers and results to satisfy each one of us who are part of this community, which has managed to increase knowledge of each one of its members, for example by increasing the number of publications to which we have access in our library portal to which each active member has his or her individual and exclusive access.

As you can see, we are in a time of changes, therefore these great challenges could be solved more easily and adequately, in order to have a better Mexican Neuroscience Magazine, also a prosperous Mexican Academy of Neurology and above all a fairer, healthier, more responsible and honest country.

Ildefonso Rodríguez-Leyva
Editor-in-Chief